KRAZY KAT "NIGHT HOWLS"

Produced by Charles B. Mintz Distributed by Paramount

Krazy Kat is the very much hen-pecked husband. His friends call for him one evening to take him out. His wife refuses to let him go and gives him a stack of dishes and clothes to wash.

He finally manages to skip out and joins his pals. They go to a night-club and drink a lot of liquor. After considerable time and when he is very drunk, Krazy Kat decides to go home.

He attempts to come into the house without making any noise. Nevertheless, he bumps into a suit of armor, which clatters to the floor, falls against the piano and bangs the notes and to top it all going up the stairs, he falls down, breaking the bannisters. This finally sobers him up and he visualizes a picture of his wife waiting upstairs with the proverbial rolling pin.

He goes upstairs and instead of finding his wife, there is a note telling him that she has gone home to mother. He starts to dance around with joy but his joy is shortlived. because in marches his wife with her mother. His wife tells him that instead of going to live with mother she has brought mother to live with them. Then they both start to beat the poor fellow up.
